First-Year Writing Seminars*:

MEDVL 1101  ASPECTS OF MEDIEVAL CULTURE:
Section 101  “The Forest Primeval” from Philosophy to Folklore

What is a forest? An idyllic paradise? Troll territory? A locus of resources? Home? In this class, we will take a multi-angle approach to reading forest ecosystems and cultural imagination in Europe and North America. Beginning with the early Middle Ages, we will encounter forests in texts such as philosophic writing on “spiritual wilderness”, Celtic nature poetry, and Otherworld romances. We will then discuss the forest in folklore and balladry, and in A Midsummer Night’s Dream. We will conclude with selected works of writers such as Thoreau, Muir, and Lopez, through which we will examine what might be the role of literature in current environmental discussions. Film and music, such as Princess Mononoke and Sibelius’ Tapiola will supplement literary readings. Writing assignments will include short analyses, longer research papers, creative writing, and weekly journal entries.

Section 102  Reading in the Middle, & Digital, Ages

In an age of “new media,” the ways we read, and interact with, texts seem to be undergoing rapid changes and deep transformations. In such an environment, what can we gain from considering “really old media,” like medieval manuscripts? A lot! This course will survey the history of how people made, read, and used texts from the early Middle Ages through the Reformation. Drawing on Cornell’s Rare Book and Manuscript Collections, scholarly essays, and our collective experiences with digital media, we will strive to think and write about old books and old documents in new ways. Writing assignments will include formal descriptive analyses of medieval manuscripts and comparative analyses of medieval and modern modes of reading.

Section 103  Saints at War: Battling the Devil in the Middle Ages

Spiritual struggles, in which the heroic Christian fights supernatural devils or human aggressors in order to maintain faith, are common in stories about saints in the Middle Ages. These clashes, which range from beguiling temptation to verbal abuse, and are combatted by saintly steadfastness and miraculous agency, help make these stories worth analyzing as literary and cultural documents rather than simply moral lessons. This class will examine a broad range of medieval saints’ lives, from the late Roman Empire’s “lives” of St. Perpetua and St. Antony, through later accounts to Chaucer’s period and beyond. Class discussions will seek to draw out major themes and historic issues in order to develop the skills for writing informal responses, close readings, and critical essays.

Section 104  Writing the Ruin of Empires

Crisis. Collapse. Even the ultimate decline of Western civilization. You find this story told everywhere, from newspapers to The Colbert Report. But, authors in the West have been writing narratives of decline for as long as they have been writing at all. Our question in this course is not really why great civilizations fall, but rather why we have always been so interested in predicting it. We will therefore attend especially to those imaginative properties which inhere to narratives of decline. We examine a range of ancient and medieval texts, setting them in conversation with contemporary works of art – literary, cinematic, pictorial – in order to understand the aesthetic and rhetorical function of such cultural pessimism. Assignments include informal responses and critical essays.

MEDVL 1103  LEGENDS, FANTASY & VISION:
Section 101  From Utopia to Dystopia: Medieval Fantasies & Modern Hells

“It was a bright cold day in April and the clocks were striking 13.” George Orwell’s 1984, one of the best-known works of dystopian literature, is just one addition to a long tradition of writing about the perfect society. Beginning with selections from Plato’s Republic and moving through such medieval utopian works as Augustine’s City of God and Christine de Pizan’s Book of the City of Ladies, we will grapple with presentations of the ideal society. With this foundation, we will move into more modern dystopian literature, such as Yevgeny Zamyatin’s We and Mary Bradley Lane’s Mizora. Formal writing assignments, including creative writing and peer-review, as well as class discussion will strengthen students’ critical thinking and writing abilities.

Section 102  There & Back Again: The Medieval Origins of Tolkien’s Quest

J. R. R. Tolkien tops many lists as the greatest author of the twentieth century, a distinction that often dwarfs his role as a long-time professor of Anglo-Saxon literature at Oxford. This class will explore how Tolkien’s interest in and scholarship on medieval literature and languages informed his fiction writing. Readings will include selections from The Hobbit, The Lord of the Rings, and The Silmarillion, as well as some of his shorter works and essays. These texts will be read alongside important medieval works such as selections of Old English poetry, Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, Old Norse poetry and sagas, and the Finnish Kalevala. This course will hone students’ writing and analytic skills through class discussion, writing exercises, and formal papers.

ROMS 1102  THE CRAFT OF STORYTELLING: DECAMERON

All of us tell stories for a variety of reasons—to entertain, to console, to teach, to persuade—to discover and explore both our inner lives and the world we inhabit. Stories are one of the prime ways in which we make sense of a world that is not always propitious. They serve as instruments by which we seek to shape our future. In this seminar, we shall consider how the craft of storytelling helps us face the task of living: the love and the happiness and the community we seek, the virtues we espouse, our talents and our vulnerabilities. Our principal reading (in English translation) will be a masterpiece of European literature, Giovanni Boccaccio’s Decameron (ca. 1350–52), which showcases one hundred stories told by ten young Florentines fleeing the Black Death of 1348. Students will write both analytic and personal essays.
Courses for upper-level undergraduates and graduate students:

MEDVL 2170  EARLY IBERIAN SURVEY (also SPAN 2170)

This course explores major texts and themes of the Hispanic tradition from the 11th to the 17th centuries. We will examine general questions on literary analysis and the relationship between literature and history around certain events, such as medieval multicultural Iberia, the creation of the Spanish Inquisition in the 15th century and the expulsion of the Jews in 1492; the encounter between the Old and the New Worlds; the ‘opposition’ of high and low in popular culture, and of the secular and the sacred in poetry and prose. Readings may be drawn from medieval short stories and miracle collections; chivalric romances, Columbus, Lazarillo de Tormes, Cervantes, Lope de Vega, Calderón, and Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz, among others.

MEDVL 2219  LANGUAGE & HISTORY IN THE BRITISH ISLES
16843  MWF 10:10-11:00.  4 credits.  W. Harbert.

This course examines themes in historical linguistics, language contact, and sociolinguistics, in the context of the complex linguistic history of the British Isles.

MEDVL 2236  INTRODUCTION TO GAELIC (also LING 2236)
16844  MWF 1:25-2:15.  4 credits.  W. Harbert.

Introduction to the Scottish Gaelic language, with some discussion of its history, structure, and current status.

MEDVL 2271  FAMILY LIFE IN RENAISSANCE ITALY (also HIST 2271, ITAL 2271)

The seminar explores the structures and sentiments of family life in Renaissance Italy, from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century, through a combination of translated primary sources and modern studies. Chief among the primary sources are the fifteenth-century dialogues On the Family by the humanist Leon Battista Alberti, supplemented by diaries and memoirs, letters, sermons, and prescriptive writings by fathers, humanists, and churchmen. Among the topics to be investigated are the variety of family structures, marriage, sexual relations, wives and husbands, parents and children, families in politics, and family memory and commemoration in art and religious life.

MEDVL 2590  THE CRUSADES (also HIST 2590)
14827  TR 1:25-2:40.  4 credits.  O. Falk & P. Hyams.

This Lecture Course examines the Crusading Movement and the States it produced from the eleventh century to the fall of the mainland Kingdom of Jerusalem in 1292. Central themes include but are not limited to the following: the Medieval Conquest, Settlement & Loss by Europeans of “Latin” lands in the Mid-East, the associated history of the Church and its contextual intellectual history, political narrative and military history, social and economic analysis, together with an elementary understanding of Islam and the conflict of cultures and religions during a formative period in Western Civilization.

MEDVL 3080  ICELANDIC FAMILY SAGAS (also ENGL 3080)
17130  MWF 11:15-12:05.  4 credits.  T. Hill.

An introduction to Old Norse-Icelandic mythology and the Icelandic family saga—the “native” heroic literary genre of Icelandic tradition. Texts will vary but will normally include the Prose Edda, the Poetic Edda, Hrafnkels Saga, Njals Saga, Laxdaela Saga, and Grettirs Saga. All readings will be in translation.
A close reading of Beowulf. Attention will be given to relevant literary, cultural, and linguistic issues.

MEDVL 3140
LOVE & ECSTASY: FORMS OF DEVOTION IN MEDIEVAL ENGLISH LITERATURE (also ENGL 3140)
14706

Late medieval art is known for its violent and graphic depictions of the crucifixion of Christ. Devotional practices followed suit, emphasizing the carnal details of the passion, and using the suffering of Christ as a centerpiece for religious devotion. This course will explore the range of affective responses exhibited in literatures written by and for anchorites, mystics, religious and lay audiences, paying special attention to metaphoric depictions of Christ as lord, lover, and mother. Special attention will be paid to bodily ecstatic forms of devotion and discipline, including self-mutilation, mortification, celibacy, fasting, and martyrdom. In order to analyze these phenomena we will rely on contemporary theories of the body and of (self-) discipline. Primary readings will be in Middle English.

MEDVL 3190
CHAUCER (also ENGL 3190)
14769
MWF 12:20-1:10. 4 credits.  A. Galloway.

Chaucer was called a founder of English poetry before he was entirely cold in his grave. Why is what he wrote more than six hundred years ago still riveting for us today? It’s not just because his world and language of London and the royal court turned out to be one of the centers of later English language and literature; it’s also because what he wrote was funny, chilling, political, philosophical, and notoriously bawdy. We will read some of his early short poems then dig into his two greatest achievements: the epic Troilus and Crisyeede and The Canterbury Tales, in relation to his cultural contexts and literary traditions. Chaucer will be read in Middle English, but no previous knowledge of the language is required.

MEDVL 3210
MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY (also PHIL 3210)
16356
MWF 10:10-11:00. 4 credits.  L. Cesalli.

A selective survey of Western philosophical thought from the fourth to the 14th century. Topics include the problem of universals, the theory of knowledge and truth, the nature of free choice and practical reasoning, and philosophical theology. Readings (in translation) include Augustine, Boethius, Anselm, Abelard, Aquinas, Scotus, and Ockham. Some attention will be given to the development of ideas across the period and the influence of non-Western traditions on the West.

MEDVL 3270
CONSTANTINOPLE/ISTANBUL, 330-1566 (also ARTH 2740)
15574
TR 8:40-9:55. 4 credits.  B. Anderson.

Ancient Byzantium, rebuilt and renamed by the Roman emperor Constantine the Great, raised by his successors to be the capital of a “Byzantine” empire, object of desire for travelers and crusaders, crowning conquest of the Ottoman sultan Mehmet: the city on the Bosporus stands at the center of the late antique, medieval, and early modern Mediterranean. We will consider its urban development from ancient polis to modern metropolis, its marvels of religious architecture from the Hagia Sophia to the Süleymaniye, the splendor of its residences from the Great Palace of the Byzantine Emperors to the Topkapı Sarayı, and the daily life of its humbler residents from the games of the Hippodrome to the taverns and brothels.

MEDVL 4360  CONFLICT RESOLUTION IN MEDIEVAL EUROPE (also HIST 4360)
14868  W 7:30-9:25.  4 credits.  P. Hyams.

This seminar concentrates on a time (late 9th-13th centuries) when much of Europe lacked formal systems of justice, and so handled questions of social control quite largely by extra-legal means. Its subject is in one sense political history upside-down, as viewed by individuals rather than their rulers. We examine ways in which anthropology and some recent approaches to law can assist: the readings will be partly anthropology, partly translated medieval accounts of actual conflicts, with samples of recent interpretation. The topics covered should be of interest to law students and majors in anthropology and other modern social sciences.

MEDVL 6102  LATIN PALEOGRAPHY (also LATIN 7222)
16271  W 1:25-3:20; F 1:25-2:15.  4 credits.  A. Hicks.

This course is an introduction to and survey of Latin scripts from Roman antiquity through the early Renaissance, with an emphasis on the identification, localization, and reading of scripts. Class meetings will combine practical study of Latin scripts through medieval manuscripts in the Kroch library, facsimiles, and online digital reproductions with instruction in the cultural-historical background to manuscript production, library practices, and bibliographical resources. Students will also be introduced to basic techniques for codicological description and the principles of textual criticism. There will be a mid-term and a final exam. A solid understanding of Latin grammar and morphology is a prerequisite for the course, and students in doubt about their readiness should consult with the instructor.

MEDVL 6210  SEMINAR IN MEDIEVAL PHILOSOPHY (also PHIL 6210)
16258  M 2:30-4:25.  4 credits.  L. Cesalli.

Graduate seminar covering a topic in medieval philosophy.

MEDVL 6645  GOThic (also LING 6645)
16845  TBA.  4 credits. Prerequisite: LING 1101. W. Harbert.

Linguistic structure of Gothic, with extensive readings of Gothic texts.

16846  TBA.  4 credits. W. Browne.

MEDVL 6690  SPACE, PLACE & NARRATIVE IN MEDIEVAL & EARLY MODERN SPAIN (also SPAN 6690)

This graduate seminar will explore configurations of space and place in different narrative genres of the Spanish middle ages and the renaissance. Topics to be addressed include didacticism, empire, local/global, frontier, loci, urbs/orbe; through cartography, cartographic writing, human geography and the production of space/place within genres such as epic, lyric, hagiography, picaresque, novel and drama. Theoretical texts that will inform these readings will include Michel de Certeau, David Woodward, Henri Lefebyre, Yi-Fu Tuan, Ed Casey, David Harvey, Denis Cosgrove.

MEDVL 7201  SEMINAR IN MEDIEVAL MUSIC (also MUSIC 7201)

Topic: The Chansons of Guillaume de Machaut

Guillaume de Machaut (1300-1377) has canonical status in music history as the first composer who was actively involved in the collection and preservation of his musical and literary works. These in turn display a high degree of authorial self-consciousness and ironic play redolent of postmodern literature and theory. This course examines the musical, literary, historical, and material contexts of his most “modern” repertory, the formes fixes chansons (virelai, ballade, rondeau, and lai), and also addresses historiographical and theoretical approaches to the study of medieval music and its cultural meaning.
